

Amy Hart Design

Amy Hart has a rich history in the field of art and design. Graduating with a Bachelor's Degree in Fine Arts from Syracuse University, she went on to collaborate with companies such as Hallmark and York Wallcoverings. Her fascination with recycling objects into art included an internship with a blacksmith in Pennsylvania. She loves to create found object art sculpture that makes people happy and reminds them that life is too important to be taken seriously.

Amy has participated in numerous art shows and festivals. She is currently showing work at the Ciel Gallery in Charlotte, Pottery 101 in Salisbury and Troika Craft in Floyd, VA. She recently completed interior and exterior sculpture installations in the Levine Children's Hospital's emergency room entrance.

“A found item may have served a past purpose that was totally utilitarian, and now its function is transformed,” says Amy. “Through the transformation of the object to art, we can all be inspired every day in our own lives to reinvent-recycle experiences and perceptions we carry about ourselves.”
