

Ferebee Farm

James Ferebee launched Ferebee Farm in 2011; since then the farm has grown quite a bit and currently produces pasture-raised lamb, poultry, pork, and eggs.

All their animals are raised outdoors and allowed to fully express their natural instincts. By following natural patterns and using symbiotic relationships between species they are improving the environment while producing nutritionally superior food. Their livestock and laying hens are all heritage breeds including flock of critically endangered Gulf Coast Native sheep.

They raise their animals naturally; all of their products are free of antibiotics, steroids, artificial hormones, and any other drugs.
